Lloyd L. Hecathorn, Builder, Dies

Lloyd L. Hecathorn, 51, 2308 South Wilamette, well-known Eugene contractor, died early Monday morning at a local hospital, following an illness of several weeks. He had been a resident of Eugene since 1914, but was born Oct. 29, 1892, at Dayton, Iowa.

For more than 20 years, Hecathorn had operated as an independent builder and contractor, and he had remodelled a number of store buildings in Eugene, as well as other building work. He was especially active in the Moose lodge.

Surviving him are his mother, Mrs. Amanda Hecathorn, 3242 Onyx; one son, Ensign Lloyd L. Hecathorn, U. S. Navy; one brother, Harley, of Seattle.

Funeral announcements will be made later by the Veatch-Hollingsworth funeral home. The son is reported to be flying home to attend his father's services.

Washington Papers Feel Union Action

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—(AP)—The WLB today directed top officers of the International typographical union (independent) to appear at a hearing Wednesday to explain why members of their union are "authorized or permitted or encouraged" to strike or slow down.

The board, which had been considering such action for some time, acted after certification of a wage dispute between the union and Washington newspaper publishers. Although they have not formally called a strike, the printers have either tied up or crippled publication of all Washington dailies by ordering a continuous session of union members.

The board ordered the printers to return to work immediately and summoned their representatives and the publishers to a hearing at 4 p. m. today to determine the cause and effect of the dispute. The board, however, said it would not adjudicate the merits until normal operation is resumed.

Similar circumstances attended a dispute between the union and Newark publishers a few weeks ago. More recently the typographical union crippled two of Salt Lake City's three newspapers.

A SATIRE IN RHYME

As head of the division of provision for revision
We a man of prompt decision,
Merton Quirk,
Ph. D. in calisthenics, P. D. Q. in pathogenics,
He had just the proper background for the work.

From the pastoral aroma of
Alsea, Oklahoma,
With a pittance of a salary in hand,
His acceptance had been whetted, even aided and abetted,
By emolument that netted some five grand.

So with energy ecstatic this fanatic left his attic,
And hastened on to Washington, Hurrah!
Where with nerve and vim and vigor he went hunting for the nigger
In the woodpile of the O. P. A.

After months of patient process
Merton's spicular proboscis
Had unearthed a reprehensible hiatus,
In reply by Blair and Blair to the thirteenth questionnaire
In connection with their inventory status.

They had written, "Your directive
Which effective was defective
In its ultimate objective, and what's more,
Neolithic hieroglyphic is, to us, much more specific
Than the drivel you keep dumping at our door."

This sacrilege discovered, Merton fainted, but recovered
Sufficiently to write, "We are convinced
That sabotage is camouflaged behind perverted persiflage;
Expect me on the 22nd inst."

But first he sent a checker, and then a checker's checker;
Still nothing was disclosed as being wrong.
So a checker's checker checker came to check the checker's checker,
And the process was laborious and long.

Then followed a procession of the fellow-up profession
Through the records of the firm of Blair and Blair;
From breakfast until supper some new super-follow-upper
Tore his hair because of Merton's questionnaire.

The file is closed, completed, though our hero undefeated,
Carries on in some department as before.
But victory is in sight, not because of, but in spite
Of Merton's mighty efforts in the war.

WILLKIE FAN

EUGENE—(To the Editor)—The old warhorse Republicans must be kidding about being tired of F.D.R. and the New Deal bureaus. Wendell Willkie is the only republican candidate who gave F. D. any scare about his success at the polls. F. D. probably was not aware that he had an opponent for his place in 1936 until he went to vote and saw Alf Landon's heading the Republican ticket.

In 1940 F. D. said he was going to be too busy keeping our boys from shedding their blood on foreign soil to bother about his election to the third term.

But toward the end of the campaign he awoke to the fact that Willkie was giving him the scare of his life. F. D. let the affairs of state go hang while he got out and campaigned to save his own hide.

Now Landon, Bricker et al are out to stop Willkie.

Mr. Willkie came all the way up to his present position in life the hard way just as Lincoln did, and he has the same old brand of politicians fighting him who fought Lincoln.

If the Republicans want four more years of New Deal waste and boondoggling just keep up your senseless "stop Willkie" tactics and we will surely have just that.

Willkie may never be president but he has more ability, more courage and more of everything it is going to take to get this country back on a pay-as-you-go basis than any half dozen of those pinhead Republicans have who are out to stop Willkie.

You guys are all doing just what F. D. would have you do.

Lag in Italian War Hints Imminence of Second Front

(Note: During the temporary absence of DeWitt MacKenzie, this feature is being conducted by William Frye of the Washington bureau).

By WILLIAM FRYE
Associated Press War Analyst

The hints and promises of a European invasion, getting broader and stronger by the day, have picked up reinforcement from an unexpected quarter—allied headquarters in Algiers.

A report by Wes Gallagher of the Associated Press makes it clear that the Italian campaign is far behind schedule, that its principal gain has been a network of mainland air bases, and that the western Mediterranean campaign no longer is considered as a major offensive.

It has, of course, been obvious for some time that the Anglo-American march on Rome was not packing anything like the punch of the march on Tunisia. The real significance of this report from Algiers lies in its plain statements, passed by military censors, that

(1) the Italian surrender turned out to be less important militarily than the allies had hoped, (2) Other theaters now take priority in supplies and troops, and (3) The allies really don't care now whether they capture Rome or not.

The "bad terrain and unfavorable weather" explanation of slow progress has some validity, says Gallagher, but not as much as these other factors. And nobody now expects a decisive blow to be struck in Italy.

Fitted into the pattern of other recent developments, this all lends strength to the belief that the allies are preparing a heavy blow for western Europe. It follows the Tehran promise of new attacks from the west, south and east. It follows Secretary Anthony Eden's prediction of invasion in the very near future. And it comes in the midst of a new flurry of reports and rumors of important allied staff and command changes, all more or less concerned with the huge reservoir of troops and supplies amassed in Britain.

One of these reports is that Gen. George C. Marshall will not, after all, command the invasion forces. Another is that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower will move from Algiers to London to command the invasion, leaving the Mediterranean to Gen. Sir Harold Alexander. None of the reports has official confirmation, but the fact remains that staff changes of considerable extent seem to be in progress.

And presumably they are due to an approaching invasion. Of the new offensives promised at Tehran, that from the east already has started with the new red army drive south of Nevel toward the Latvian burdtr, opening a great winter push in which the Germans have admitted breakthroughs.

The blow from the west may be next.

At the Heilig:
FIRED WIFE

For best results, enter the theater approximately 44 minutes after this has started. If our count is right and the subscriber is a fast worker, as you sit down you will see a young couple just reconciled and driving away from a town depot ranch. Lights, action, camera!

Fine I:

Subtitle, "Fired Wife." The wife (Louise Allbritton) tells her husband (Robert Paige) that she was wrong and should have known it all along. He says that they should let bygones be bygones. Oh, says she, he I was right? He doesn't want to argue. It starts to rain. She becomes furious, keeps talking. He's not even gentleman enough to inform her that if she doesn't close her mouth, she'll drown. He stops the car, she finances out, gets a divorce, discovers she's going to have a little youngster, and everyone is reunited before anything unmentionable happens.

Plot II:

Subtitled, "The Prattle Is the Payoff." Two handsome, nicely-dressed people are being married in Virginia. Comes the mourning after, and her boss (Walter Abel) discovers Mrs. says come back to New York and direct my new show. The husband, his new concert expiring, says huh? But, she swears, I've got to, I've worked five years for this chance, and above all don't tell anyone we're married. The boss, burdened with the device which always gives the impression that there really is a plot, won't let anyone work for him who's married. Hubby agrees. Newlyweds return to Broadway, where he becomes involved with a primitive baggage (Diana Barrymore) who is leading commodity in his advertising business by being radio's Sunshine Lady for Krispy Krackles. When the producer discovers his prize assistant is married, there are a few tussles, wifey flies to Reno, hubby rides down to get her, and they are right back where we started.

The second plot, actually the first part of the picture, is darned good comedy, bristling with more wisecracks than a Crosby radio script. The first plot, which is the second part of the picture—if you still follow us, needs a pulmotor, iron lung, or some other resuscitory machinery. Interlinked, they're better than average entertainment if you revel in marital disagreements. Of other people, naturally.
